

Indian Seafood

PRODUCT CATALOGUE

INTRODUCTION

India is the preferred destination for all connoisseurs of seafood. One of the largest exporters of shrimp in the world, India produces the finest quality of shrimp, including L Vannamei and fish.

As total world fisheries and aquaculture production scaled a new high of 178.5 million tons during 2018, India, with an impressive contribution of 14.16 million tons in 2019-20, is the 2nd largest fish producing country. Of these 10.43 million tons come from the inland sector and the rest from marine fisheries. Most of the fish catch used for export has a marine or estuarine origin. One of the biggest labour intensive sectors in the country, India has more than 2,70,050 fishing crafts, that include over 24.4 % non-motorized crafts engaged in marine fisheries in the country. India's marine capture production is 3.72 million tons during 2019-20, while the farmed shrimp and scampi production is 8,43,633 tons during 2020-21

With world class seafood factories following quality control procedures meeting the most stringent of international standards, the Indian Seafood Industry has diversified its product range and its markets. No wonder, India's seafood exports have surged each year and we have reached a peak export level of US$ 7 billion during 2017-18, and are still growing.

The Marine Products Export Development Authority (MPEDA) under the Ministry of Commerce & Industry is an autonomous body set up in 1972 under an Act of Parliament by the Government of India. MPEDA is responsible for the promotion of exports of marine products from India. In this capacity, the MPEDA plays a pivotal role in catalyzing the growth of the industry by providing technical and financial assistance for technology and quality up-gradation of the seafood industry.

The MPEDA has been instrumental in the development of shrimp aquaculture and plays a key role in promoting sustainable aquaculture and organic farming. With the objective of strengthening aquaculture, the MPEDA is also engaged in R&D activities for commercializing sustainable aquaculture technologies.

To make seafood safe for consumers, the MPEDA administers the National Residue Control Programme for which the MPEDA has set up three sophisticated laboratories with state-of-the-art equipment like HPLC MSMS for the detection of antibiotic residues. The MPEDA acts as the central nodal agency for promoting investment in the marine products sector. The Authority has offices in all the maritime states of India and Trade Promotion Offices at New Delhi, Tokyo and New York.

PREFACE

“Indian Seafood - The world loves it” aptly describes the product range, quality and acceptance of the Indian Seafood.

Thanks to its unique taste and versatility, Indian seafood has always had admirers across the globe. The now almost insatiable demand for Indian seafood is well reflected in the exponential increase in our exports.

At present India exports a variety of marine products including shrimps, lobster, cuttlefish, squids, crabs & fish in different processed forms to some 99 countries of the world. European Union, South East Asia, China, Japan and USA are the major buyers of Indian seafood.

This revised edition of “The Product Catalogue of Indian Seafood” is an updated ready reference guide of Indian marine products which are exported today along with their specifications, and its packaging, complemented with some exclusive photographs. It may be noted that the specification of grade, net weight and packing details provided here are only indicative of the common export forms and style. All these products can cater to the specific requirements of buyers and markets as all our processing houses are equipped with the state-of-the-art infrastructure available anywhere in the world.

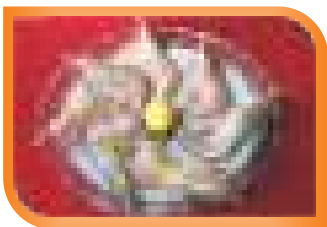

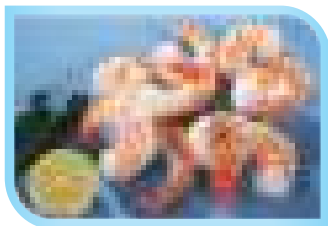

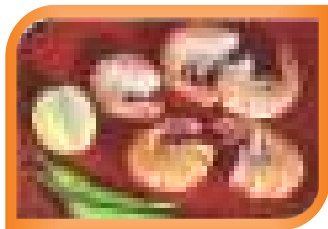

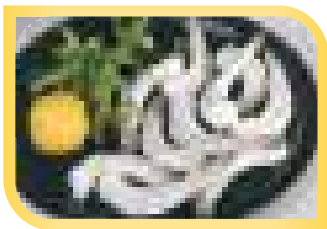

I am confident that this catalogue will be handy to importers and exporters of Indian seafood for transacting and concluding trade.
